The GA-SK is published by TDI four times a year. Its title stems from the codes first used by the telegraph industry and today by TTY callers in many countries. "GA" means "Go Ahead" and is used to indicate when the person stops typing so the other person can reply in the conversation. "SK" means "Send Kill" or "Stop Keying" to indicate the end of the conversation and to hang up the phone. Both "GA" and "SK" used together at the end of the call means "Is there anything else before we go?"
